Managing Economic Growth, Natural Resource Protection, and Culturally Significant Resources on the South Carolina Coast

So, you don't practice Administrative or Environmental Law? No worries! You don't want to miss this opportunity to learn how environmental, administrative, and regulatory law practitioners are shaping the way we all enjoy and experience South Carolina's coast. Our speakers include Judge Ralph K. "Tripp" Anderson III, attorneys from the Department of Health and Environmental Control, the South Carolina Environmental Law Project, and private practitioners, each of whom will share knowledge from their respective experiences in the fields of environmental, administrative, and regulatory law. The topics include DHEC's role in environmental conflicts, the way in which the Administrative Law Court is involved in the regulation of activity along SC's coast, how non-profit advocacy groups strive to preserve certain areas of our coast, and an exciting discussion regarding an active case involving the Public Trust Doctrine, beach renourishment, and the taking clause of the U.S. and S.C. Constitutions.
